BRITONS' HEALTH NOT PARASITES' WEALTH!

by Steve Brady

LAST MONTH'S BUDGET proved the Government cares more about the wealth of shady property speculators, corrupt City sharks, international finance wide-boys and other rich parasites than it does about the health of the ordinary British people.

Look at the facts. Chancellor Nigel Lawson couldn't and didn't give tuppence, literally, for the National Health Service. Even though hospital wards are closing every day for lack of funds, doctors' and nurses' pay is so poor that only cheap immigrant labour keeps hospitals and surgeries going, and British patients are actually dying because the Government refuses to pay the money needed to save their lives.

Instead, the Tories handed out two billion pounds in tax cuts to the sort of wealthy businessmen who keep their Party in funds. The likes of Britain's best-paid executive, a Baring Brothers merchant banker who is half a million a year better off thanks to the budget. Like most money operators who benefit from the budget, this character neither produces useful goods like an honest worker or a farmer nor helps people like a doctor or a nurse. He just parasitically juggles other peoples' money from one tax haven to another. Thousands more of the country's richest non-productive financial bloodsuckers are quids in to the tune of tens of thousands a year thanks to Lawson's budget.

Our Chancellor himself, who scrapes along on £47,000 per annum gave himself a £3,800 a year effective pay rise.

The top rate of income tax was slashed by a third, whilst the basic rate dropped by only 7.4%. The result is that someone earning five times the national average wage gets twenty-seven times the national average tax cut. So tycoon Sir Ralph Halpern gets £5,115 extra each week to splash out on his fancy women whilst a staff nurse is a mere £2.57 a week better off.

Property speculators had an extra reason to rub their hands with glee on Budget Day. The Chancellor exempted all gains in property values between the date of purchase and 1982, instead of only pre-1965 gains. He also raised thresholds and lowered rates on this tax on such things as big land and property deals. So another lot of parasites can earn an even bigger fortune without doing any work harder than playing Monopoly with real buildings. No wonder after Budget Day shares in property speculation empires like Hammerson Investments and Daejin shot up. While shares in companies that actually make useful things, like General Electric, ICI, Plessey Electronics and Glaxo Foods fell.

Meanwhile, not only did the NHS get nothing; as a result of tax rule changes, the Chancellor even grabbed £5 million a year off the income of charities.

These billions handed out by the Tories to the rich people who put them in power weren't even paid for by some real upsurge in the output of the British economy. Thatcher and Co. have stayed in power since 1979 by buying votes with tax cuts. In the same period, the share of goods bought in Britain which were made in Britain fell by a third, and Britain's share of World Markets by a fifth. Lawson's handouts were financed by the Government selling off our assets such as British Gas and British Petroleum, often to foreigners like the Kuwaitis; by increasing the Common Market tax V.A.T.; and as a result of a massive surge in unearned credit and debt from £80 billion to £280 billion, none of it reflecting a real increase in wealth.

debt, and our old, our sick, and our children die because the Government refuses to provide them with decent health care.

This was a sick Budget for a sick society, as bankrupt morally as our country will soon be financially.

The National Front demands that the ill-gotten gains of non-productive speculators, share dealers, merchant bankers and the like be taxed to the hilt to pay for a decent ● Ignored: Britain's nurses received no acknowledgement for their service.

The Tory Party has degenerated into a clique of cosmopolitan City fat cats, just like Lawson himself, who use their power to carve up Britain's national assets among themselves and to award each other massive tax cuts. Meanwhile, the underlying decline in the productive sector of the British economy continues unabated, Britons collectively individually sink ever deeper into standard of health care for the British people and decent pay for the British doctors and nurses who should be providing it.

Defending our people from illness is as important as defending them from invasion. The National Front says: BRITONS' HEALTH BEFORE PARASITES' WEALTH!

SWEAT SHOP LABOUR PUTS BRITISH WORKERS ON THE DOLE

FACTORY SHUTDOWNS, job losses and decline in standards is the predicted scene in 1989 for Britain's shoe industry thanks to the Government allowing unrestricted imports of cheap, sub-standard footwear from the Far-East.

Less than 35% of footwear sold in Britain is British made and the British Footwear Manufacturers Federation described the situation with regard to imported shoes as "frightening".

In its quarterly survey the Federation said "The explosion in Far Eastern imports is frightening, both in its volume and also in its spread into lines directly competitive with some of our most efficient producers".

These imports made with sweat shop labour in the Far East could mean the end of the British Footwear industry unless action is taken. Cost cutting by British manufacturers to compete with the imports will mean factory closures, job losses and a drop in standards.

The National Front says protect Britain's Footwear Manufacturing Industry. The NF says "All shoes, boots and slippers bought in Britain should be made in Britain, in British factories by British Workers!"

● A fine old British industry faces extinction thanks to foreign imports.

AMERICA RESISTS ECONOMIC INVASION

WHILE INDUSTRIAL and political leaders in Britain are still continuing to welcome every takeover of a British firm by a foreign concern, the Americans are beginning to have second thoughts.

Ironically the two countries which have been buying up American industries are Japan and Britain! However over recent months there has been a growing political backlash and it seems that legislation to control this will shortly be introduced.

As Mr John Bryant, a Texas democrat put it, "... before we wake up one morning and find that whole industries are dominated by the British and the Japanese".

What is so sick about British firms investing in America is that we still have over 3,000,000 unemployed and such investment in Britain could dramatically reduce this.

WE'RE GOING TO BE SWAMPED!

THE OFFICE of Population Censuses and Surveys has revealed that the coloured immigrant population in Britain is going to soar in the 1990s as more than one person in three in immigrant groups is under the age of 16 compared with one in five among British people.

Their report says that at present one in twenty of the British population is an immigrant and that the immigrant population is growing at the rate of 100,000 a year.

The National Front would safeguard the British identity by stopping coloured immigration and return all coloured immigrants to their land of ethnic origin.

FRED HILL died in Pentonville Prison in February 1984. He had been jailed for refusing to pay fines imposed for his continual refusal to wear a crash helmet while riding his motor cycle.

Now four years on a new campaigner has taken up Fred Hill's mantle. Fifty-four year-old Brian Nicholas appeared in Willsden Magistrates Court last month on his seventeenth riding without a helmet charge.

NF CAMPAIGN IN WASHWOOD HEATH

ON WEDNESDAY 6th April Birmingham National Front launched their campaign for the May Local Council Elections.

The Branch will be fighting up to five seats for Birmingham City Council with the main effort being centred on the ward of Washwood Heath.

Last May NF candidate John Hill polled an excellent 341 votes (5%) in Washwood Heath and the local NF Association in the ward is quietly confident that that vote can be improved upon.

That confidence is not based on wishful thinking but on the hard-nosed reality of 12 months work in the ward by local activists, helping local residents with their every day problems concerned with housing, education and welfare.

John Hill is again the candidate, fighting the ward for the third time. In his election address, one of the most professional put out in recent years, he lays the blame for the rising crime-rate, lack of home repairs and shortage of council homes squarely at the door of the elected councillors.

"The politicians have got us into this mess" he says, "now they want you to vote them in again so that you can have more of the same. Are they stupid, or do they think that we are?"

"The only promise that I make is that I will serve the people of Washwood Heath and safeguard their interests. My masters will be you, not party bosses or big business."

Scandalous Delay on Smear Tests

A COMPUTERISED call and re-call scheme for cervical cancer smear tests, which could prevent the deaths of more than 2,000 women a year, has yet to be implemented in many district health authorities - despite Government assurances that all districts would be given the resources to do so by the end of this month.

A recent survey of the 83 district health authorities disclosed the following shortfalls:-

97% of the districts will not have called all women aged 20-65 for their first smear test by the end of 1991.

63% will not have called them for their first smear test by the end of 1992.

36% of districts will not have called women aged 20-65 for a first test by the end of 1993.

Through every field of the National Health Service, be it pay rises for nurses, the closure of children's hospitals, vital heart operation postponements etc, it is clear for all to see that this callous, penny-pinching Tory Government has set a price limit on the health of the British people.

THE SPIRIT OF FRED HILL LIVES ON

because he was stopped on the way to court, and he defied the law again by riding away after his court case wearing the very beret and jacket worn by Fred Hill himself.

Brian Nicholas accuses police officers who stop motor cyclists for not wearing crash helmets of 'inciting racial hatred'. In fact during his latest arrest he told PC Paul Clevelley "You are inciting racial tension under Section Five of the Public Order Act"

In court, Mr Nicholas, from North Wembley, told the magistrates "This law is an insult of the highest degree to all non-Sikh cyclists" He was fined £40.00.

REFLECTIONS ON THE LAND ROVER DISPUTE

"LIFE ON THE Picket Line really brings out the community spirit in workers" say a group of National Front Land Rover employees active with the present strike at the firm. "Even the Police seem to enjoy the cups of tea and sausage sandwiches we give them while they're on strike duty"

In an interview with The FLAG the group explain the reasons for their action and the background to the dispute.

Q. Is it true that the workforce at Land Rover has generally been considered as being a very moderate one who are concerned about their company and proud of the product they produce?

A. This is quite true and certainly the workers do a very hard job on the production lines under tremendous pressure. Sales of Land/Range Rovers have increased over the past year and the company made a profit of £23 million in 1987 a sizable increase on the £6 million they made in 1986.

Has the management at Land Rover always been keen to maintain good industrial relations with their manual workforce?

Industrial relations do not exist at L/R. The management is autocratic and dictatorial. The workforce has no trust whatsoever in them.

What about the present pay at Land Rover?

For ten years we have had minimal wage increases holding us back in the pay league of car workers. We certainly earn every penny we get and deserve more.

Who does the dispute affect?

The dispute affects the TGWU, AEW, ETU plus the plumbers and fitters unions the MFS and GMB.

Is it correct that the manual workers unions consulted the membership when this year's wages negotiations fell well below expectations?

Yes, through literature and group meetings. Mass meetings were refused by the management.

LAND ROVER(UK): THE FACTS

The company's own Annual Report and Accounts showed the highest paid director for Rover PLC gave himself a pay rise of £99,000 during 1986. His salary before perks amounted to £3,761 per week!

Land Rover(UK) Ltd in the last three years gave their highest paid director a rise of 67.5%. This year the manual workers are being told to accept 4.9%.

The number of executives getting £30,000 a year at Land Rover increased from 0 to 28 in the same period.

At the same time the manual workers were being rationalised.

The accounts show that the average wage cost actually went down 1.8% between 1985 and 1986. Our wages as a percentage of the incomes from sales dropped sharply from 23% to 18%. So the part of the company costs taken up by wages is getting less and less.

It's quite clear that sacrifices made at Land Rover in recent years are somewhat unequal.

Is it correct that the manual workers requested a constitutionally carried out ballot in accordance with existing trade union laws?

Yes, but the non-manual unions did not, they held a show of hands to accept the offer and their union negotiators knew nothing about it.

What was the outcome of your ballot?

A massive two to one vote in favour of strike action 4000 to 2000, and this despite management intimidation.

What shortfalls did the manual unions find unacceptable in this years wages and condition of service negotiations?

The increase was insufficient. The consolidated bonus was already being earned - there was no new money. The wage offer amounted to £7.20 plus £1.50 on the time keeping allowance. If you were one minute late you would lose £8.50 plus one minute's pay!

One of the NF strikers summed up the dispute to The FLAG:

"The strike is not only about getting a decent wage after years of meagre increases, it is about bad management and the political interference of the Government who want to sell off Land Rover.

"The management gave names, addresses and telephone numbers (including ex-directory numbers) to Mori so they could conduct a poll. One worker was asked his opinion at 2.45 in morning!

"The management also appear to have orchestrated an illegal meeting of 'Back to Workers' (people who do excessive overtime) in Elmdon Park on Wednesday 9th March. The meeting ended in a fiasco as only 200 turned up 50 of whom were staff workers.

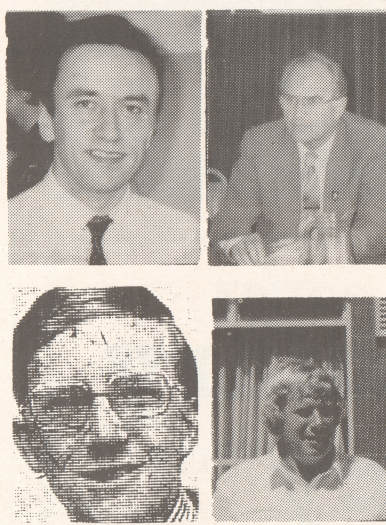

"The strike will be remembered for the dirty tricks of an arrogant management. The struggle has been worthwhile and we have brought back dignity to Trade Unionism in the battle against oppression and autocracy."

RIGHT FORMULA

With the Directorate guiding the Party nationally and branches promoting the NF locally the National Front seems to have hit on the right formula for success. 1988 has already seen a real surge in membership, especially in areas where, prior to October '86, the NF had no active unit. NATIONALIST UNITY: SUCCESSFUL RALLY IN LEEDS

SUNDAY, MARCH 27th, saw the unification of all significant British Nationalists in Yorkshire at a highly successful rally in Leeds.

Around fifty prominent local Nationalists assembled under the chairmanship of retired Bradford headmaster Stanley Clayton-Garnett to pledge their commitment to the National Front.

Leeds NF Organiser Keith Taylor introduced Mr Clayton-Garnett as meeting Chairman to patriots from Leeds, Doncaster, Sheffield, Harrogate, Bradford, Bridlington, Hull and many other Yorkshire towns.

Mr Clayton-Garnett's speech called on Nationalist to ignore the irrelevant breakaway groupings and put all their efforts into promoting the NF. He condemned the leaderships of these tiny factions as "corrupt, and inept".

Praising the free internal debate and exchange of ideas which he saw as characteristic of the NF, Mr Clayton-Garnett was applauded loudly when he called on all British patriots to join the National Front.

After a report from West Midlands NF Regional Organiser John Hill detailing the progress of the Party in his Region, where meeting attendances have quadrupled in the last two years, NF National Executive member Steve Brady spoke on the real Third World War, a Race War in which the White Race, increasingly outbred by Blacks and Asiatics, is fighting for its very survival.

The meeting concluded with a "Dutch Auction" ably conducted by Leeds Organiser Keith Taylor which was the highest ever recorded at any NF meeting in Leeds. As members left the meeting for an informal social, everyone agreed that the development of the NF throughout Yorkshire had been put on its firmest footing for years. The well-established Leeds Branch's morale reached new heights, and new units in Sheffield, Doncaster, Bradford, Hull and Bridlington were fired with enthusiasm for the NF struggle.

FRONT MEETING IN CUMBRIA

IAN ANDERSON, the National Front's National Activity Organiser, was the guest speaker at a meeting organised by local Nationalists held in a hotel in Worthington, Cumbria on Saturday 26th March.

Amongst those attending were former NF officials, new members and local activists.

All copies of The FLAG and Vanguard on sale at the meeting were quickly snapped up and Ian Anderson expressed optimism after the meeting that a National Front branch could be established in Cumbria.

Credit must go to former NF Regional Organiser for Cumbria, Kevin Wilshaw, for organising the meeting.

ON THE STREETS IN WORKSOP

MEMBERS OF the newly-formed Worksop National Front have been out on the streets promoting the NF with a series of paper sales in the town.

This is a very welcome sign of the tide turning once again in the county of Nottinghamshire. During the seventies it was a real growth area for the NF, but since the 1979 General Election there has been little activity.

Celebrating the founding of true Parliamentary Democracy

by Mark Cotterill

THIS YEAR DEVON will be celebrating the 300th anniversary of the landing of William of Orange at Brixham in 1688.

The Britain which once had a reputation for liberty, freedom and tolerance, had its beginnings in the 'Glorious Revolution', when the Tyrannical James II was supplanted by William and the true seeds of Parliamentary democracy were sown.

By the Summer of 1688, England was in a crisis. After a year of temporary de-stabilisation, James II hoped to achieve a permanent Catholic stability as a basis of a real monarchy, like that of his model and secret paymaster the Dictator Louis XIV of France. The vast majority of English people were totally against this, so much so that a letter, signed by 7 of the most influential figures in England, was taken by a British admiral, to the Court of William of Orange in Holland, begging him for help and support to liberate, first England and then Ireland.

It took William 4 months to gather together a massive army, on a flotilla of over 500 ships, to make the crossing from the Dutch port of Hellevoetsluis to the South Coast of England. It was to be the largest invasion fleet seen in Europe, before D-Day, 15,400 men, with 1,078 officers.

LANDED IN BRIXHAM

Furious gales blew the flotilla off course, pushing the ships down to the South West coast of England, until they were near Torbay. On November 5th they landed at the little fishing port of Brixham, to a tumultuous welcome. "You'm Welcome" - those were the Devonshire words of greeting to William. Devon folk had already been warned that William was on his way, and locals greeted the news with loud cheers, merrymaking and enthusiastic hat-throwing. On his arrival William told the watchers he had "come for all your goods" (he meant good, but the locals understood). William shouted for someone to carry him regally ashore, and Fisherman Peter Varwell then claimed his place in the History books, by bringing the future King of England to dry land on his shoulders. For this deed he was later handsomely rewarded with £100, which he used to buy a large new house in Brixham.

William's first night in England was spent in Peter Varwell's local house, in which he polished off a meal of Brixham Fish and Black Tea. He was guarded by the 17th Century equivalent of the Household Cavalry. Brixham was swarming with Dutch soldiers, and footmen lit large fires as the weather was freezing. Brixham's alehouses did a roaring trade and what little food was left in the Town's shops was given to the hungry Hollanders.

Next day the 30 mile march to Exeter began. This was punctuated by a stop-off at Yalberton for Dinner and the famous first Parliament at Longcombe. It was here that William met the local notables who had been behind the move to bring him and his army to liberate England. The second night was spent by the bulk of the army, camped out in a wet and soggy Paignton.

MAJOR SPEECH

From Paignton the army marched to Newton Abbot, where they found it was Market Day. William had a ready-made audience here, for his first major speech. Hundreds of local shoppers and non-conformist

London, took until December. There the political differences of the 'leaders of England' sank, or were masked. They invited William to assume the government and call a "free parliament". In February 1689 Parliament handed to him the "Bill of Rights" formally condemning the acts and methods of James II, and offered him the Crown. On April 11th, William and his wife Princess Mary Stuart were crowned King true nature of the anniversary itself being 'hi-jacked' by the Local councils and tourist board and changed into a 'William and Mary' Anglo-Dutch friendship week. The main week of 'celebrating' will not be around November 5th, the anniversary of the landing at Brixham, but between 17th to 23rd of July! As with Christmas now, the true meaning of the anniversary will be lost to the vast majority of people who attend the tourist boards' American style jamboree

So to the 'July Celebrations' themselves. Some say we should be grateful to have these, as there has been a very active campaign to get the whole thing called off. The 'anti-celebration' campaign has been led by the Marxist section of the Devon Labour Party, Anti-Fascist Action, the S.W.P. the W.R.P., Troops Out Movement and a whole host of other pro IRA/Communist groups, including the 'Colonel Gaddafi Admiration Society'. Throughout 1987 they tried to persuade the local councils to withdraw its financial support from the Celebrations, but to no avail. To the Councillors credit, they 'stuck to the guns' and told the Marxists where to go!

So the week long 'William and Mary - Anglo-Dutch Festival' goes ahead, starting on Sunday 17th July, when a flotilla of over 100 yachts will arrive in Torbay from the Dutch port of Hellevoetsluis. A host of events will then take place through the week, from Monday 18th to Friday 22nd of July, in the Torbay resorts of Torquay, Paignton and Devon.

CAMPAIGN

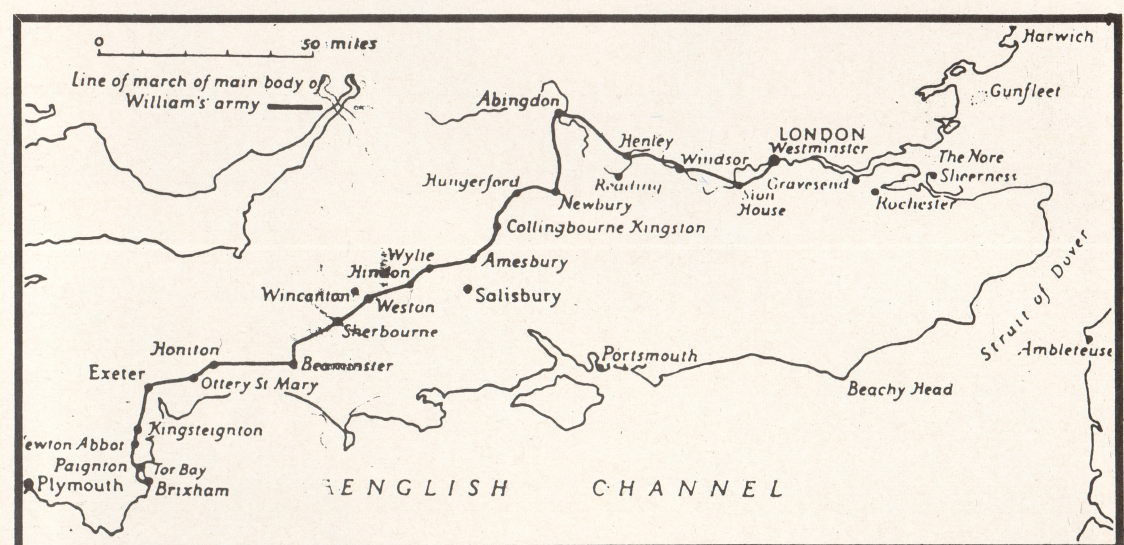

The celebrations can be used to mount an all-out campaign against the flagging 'Anglo-Irish Agreement'. In Ulster opposition to the 'Agreement' has been massive, but on the mainland, the Loyalist/Unionist message has been heard by very few, let's change that this year.

To mark the start of the celebrations, Devon NF are organising a joint Nationalist/Loyalist Camp, to be held over the Spring Bank Holiday weekend - Friday 27th May to Monday 30th May, on a campsite near Newton in Devon.

These celebrations provide us with a once in a lifetime opportunity so let's make the most of it. Let's bring the message of the people of Ulster to the people of Devon. And let that message be the same one it has always been. . . "In two World Wars the loyalist people of Ulster stood by Britain, now in our hour of need, we need the British people to stand by Ulster".

WILLIAM'S ROUTE TO LONDON

● William's departure from Hellevoetsluis in November 1688 with 225 ships visitors packed the centre of the Town to hear him. A declaration was read by a minister in English, which said 'William had come to preserve the Protestant religion and restore the Laws and Liberties of the land.'

Exeter, the County town of Devon, where William and his army stayed for a few days was used as a recruiting centre. His forces were swelled by many Westcountrymen, who like their Dutch counterparts were well behaved. No disorders were committed and never better order could be kept in any army. However the army was never needed, as there was to be no fighting.

James II and his forces advanced to meet the Dutch army and got as far west as Salisbury. But here his army was dissolved. James's second daughter, Anne, with her husband, deserted him. So did his once faithful General, John Churchill, and after him the bulk of the army. There was rioting in favour of William in most of the provinces and James knew he was beaten.

SABOTAGED

In a state of nervous collapse, James with a few followers returned to London. There he deliberately sabotaged future government by throwing the Great Seal into the River Thames. After this he fled secretly into Kent, heading for France, to be restored, if at all, by French arms. Later the overthrow of James was to be known as the 'Glorious Revolution' and for most Englishmen it was nothing short of a miracle.

William's trouble free march to William III and Queen Mary II of England, Scotland and Ireland.

So November 5th, 1688 was a turning point, in the bringing of democracy to our shores, and Devon will be celebrating this throughout 1988, its 300th anniversary. So what sort of celebrations have been planned? Who is organising them and who is against them?

There has over the last year, been a lot of media coverage in the South West about these celebrations, being 'hi-jacked' by 'extremist groups', however nothing has been said about the

Sanctuary on the Rates

ILLEGAL immigrant, Viraj Mendis, the son of a wealthy Sri Lankan tea planter is receiving £100 a month courtesy of the Manchester ratepayers.

The money comes from a charity set up 3 years ago to assist immigrants awaiting deportation. The charity has received over £100,000 from Manchester City Council.

The NF pledge to save the people of Manchester this expense. Mendis will be on a boat back home on the very day the National Front takes power.

Best Qualified

JOB opportunities for coloured immigrants in inner-city and rural areas could well diminish later this year despite the Government's Inner-Cities Initiative.

This warning came from the Institute of Personnel Management who fear that when the Local Government Bill becomes law, many contractor companies who work for local authorities will look to employ the best qualified applicants rather than ensuring that their employment policies are in line with the requirements of the Race Relations Act.

FOREIGN bureaucrats in Brussels are to ban British lawnmowers because they are too noisy.

The EEC ruling means job losses at the Qualcast factory in Derby.

A BOOK promoting lesbianism is on display at a mothers and toddlers centre thanks to funds made available by the looney Left controlled Greater London Arts Association.

The book, Everybody's Different is on sale for £1.99 at the Dalston Children's Centre in East London.

Tory MP Anthony Beaumont-Dark described the book as 'complete filth' and naively asked "Where have the days of innocent fun like Enid Blyton and Noddy gone?"

Good Luck Jean-Marie

APRIL SEES THE French Presidential Elections. It's a fascinating contest with candidates representing the Socialists, two Conservative Parties, the Communists and the National Front.

There will be very few NF members on this side of the channel who won't be glued to the television on election night hoping and praying for a good showing by the Front Nationale's candidate, Jean-Marie Le Pen.

BACK FROM THE BRINK

The rise of the NF in France has been spectacular. In a matter of eight years the party has come back from the brink to achieve real influence in France with numerous MPs and councillors throughout the country. The brink for the Front Nationale was in 1980, when still a tiny fragmented party, their Chairman Francois Du Prat, was assassinated when Communists placed a bomb under his car in a port in Northern France.

His place was taken by M. Le Pen who pulled the Party up by its bootstraps and has presided over its growth to the size it is today.

Proportional representation is the reason why the FN succeeded. In 1977 when we achieved those excellent election results, the 119,000 votes in London in the GLC elections and the string of 20% of the vote in local council elections, because of Britain's antiquated and unfair electoral system, we had nothing to show for our efforts. When the opposition parties united and turned their attacks on us we had no one to fight our corner. Unlike the Front Nationale we had no MPs or councillors to answer the lies, expose the deception of the smears or campaign on our behalf in the council chamber against the unfair bans.

THE ONLY REASON

Proportional representation is the only reason the National Front in France are more advanced than the National Front in Britain.

I will be watching the results hoping that the FN maintain their percentage of the vote, a very encouraging 9% achieved in the Euro-Elections, or even improve to 13% which M. Le Pen believes a real possibility.

In 1985 at the NF Head office in Croydon I was berated by a group of former rising NF starlets, led by a very intense bespectacled young man, who ridiculed an article I had written in support of the FN. They claimed that the Front Nationale were ideologically unsound and that I had embarrassed the NF by associating us with them.

Sucks! was what I said to them then, and Sucks is what I say now to any critics of the editorial. If the Front Nationale can influence French opinion to such an extent as to bring about the repatriation of millions of coloured immigrants from part of Europe back to their own countries then I'm 100% behind them. I also believe that any success for the Front Nationale in France will rub off on the National Front here in Britain.

It is for those reasons that I have no apprehension whatsoever in wishing Jean-Marie Le Pen and the Front Nationale the very best of luck in the forthcoming French Presidential election.

THE TED BUDDEN COLUMN

TV Spectacular

THE BRITISH Government's campaign to win the hearts and minds of IRA terrorists seems to have reached the hearts and flowers stage with the authorities showing almost tender regard for the IRA's susceptibilities.

It seems that now, when the IRA stages a show funeral for one of its primitive tribesmen, the authorities have agreed to stay well clear if the IRA agree not to fire a volley of shots over the grave.

The result has been that the IRA now fire a symbolic volley of shots at another location to honour the fallen primitive. Firing shots into the air on the local rubbish dump is, of course, quite a ludicrous and pointless exercise, or at least it would be if it was held in secret.

There is no danger of that. The TV companies have shown their willingness to co-operate with the IRA by filming the rubbish dump charade and tacking it on to their coverage of the funeral, thus creating the proper "military" atmosphere.

Since the TV crews must have advance knowledge of the commission of this crime and know the identity of the organisers, I would suppose that they are guilty of aiding and abetting its commission.

For despite the short-lived shock, horror, gasp, that accompanies TV's coverage of IRA atrocities, the BBC has long been the IRA's unofficial Public Relations Office. Its bulletins are replete with respectful references to "IRA Active Service Units" and "IRA Army Council" as if the murderous blockheads were honourable soldiers.

Note too the number of occasions when the attacks on the security forces are filmed from behind the IRA lines and TV coverage tailored to the IRA's requirements.

The S.African authorities realised long ago that the presence of TV cameras was an incitement to violence among the primitive tribesmen in the black townships. Is there any reason to doubt that it has the same effect on the primitive tribes of the Bogside and West Belfast?

Devil's Disciple

THE ACCIDENTAL shooting of a local Sinn Fein organiser and strutting provocateur at an Ulster border checkpoint recently brought the predictable twittering and fluttering among the "liberal" dovescotes and the even more predictable outburst from that pestilential priest Cardinal Thomas O'Fee - a man who constantly causes me to harbour unworthy thoughts of a Cromwellian final solution to the Irish problem.

Almost before the echo of the shots had died away, the foul O'Fee had delivered himself of the opinion that the death was "murder". However, since the victim was apparently killed by a ricochet, the contumacious cardinal apparently believes that the British Army is trained to kill by the in-off method; in which case he has a higher opinion of their marksmanship than I do.

Yet despite the fact that this ghastly man of God appears quite willing to commit the deadly sin of bearing false witness, seems totally devoid of Christian charity, and makes inflammatory statements that provide justification for the homicidal psychopaths of the IRA, he is never repudiated by the authorities.

They seem mesmerised by the priestly garb despite the fact that throughout the ages it has often been the cloak of great evil, and in Ireland constantly so. From the treacherous inmates of the Westminster gasworks we get only wimpish bleating about there being no military solution to terrorism in N.Ireland - though I cannot recall there being any attempt at one - and it is necessary to make concessions to the likes of Cardinal O'Fee in order to win their hearts and minds.

I wonder what concessions would be necessary to win a heart so black and a mind so contorted by bigotry and malice as that of Cardinal O'Fee.

Unlike the Westminster wimps, I lean to the view of the American Right which is quite simply "When you've got them by the balls, their hearts and minds will follow".

At present, Cardinal O'Fee is in the cosy position of being provided with British funds to finance the Catholic schools where sullen numbskulls are indoctrinated with subversive propaganda. A great contribution to the defeat of terrorism in N.Ireland would be to cut off those funds completely.

He should still be able to appeal to the Government of Eire for money, of course. After all, that fat Tammany windbag, Charles Haughey, is exceedingly keen on intervening in N.Ireland. Somehow, though, I don't think providing cash to their fellow "nationalists" is the kind of intervention that the bankrupt potato republic has in mind.

The Reason Why

ONE THING that both Eire and Spain have in common, apart from Catholicism, is that they both lay claim to British territory - in Eire's case, N.Ireland; in Spain's case Gibraltar.

There the similarity ends. Contrast the enthusiastic assistance given by the Spanish in foiling the attempted IRA bomb outrage in Gibraltar and the summary dispatching of the terrorists with the continued reluctance of the Irish to hand over IRA terrorists who find sanctuary in Eire, even when those terrorists are British citizens.

Spain's attitude is, of course, coloured by the fact that Spain has suffered for years from terrorist bombings and terrorist shootings. Eire has suffered none.

But the Government of Eire should not be too complacent. Terrorism respects no boundaries and some day someone will tire of Irish impudence and Irish interference and come to the conclusion that there is a way of changing Eire's attitude after all.

ENVIRONMENT UNDER THREAT

BANKERS BEHIND DESTRUCTION OF KENT

THE TORY Bankers swindle has reached its peak in Kent this month.

A garden shed on Hosey Hill, Westerham, Nr. Sevenoaks has just been sold for £34,000. It's just one more peg in the cog of greed and profit that is currently hitting Kent, with housing in Kent averaging £65,000 for the a small semi detached cottage

The Tory faithful, Bankers, Mortgage Societies and Insurance Companies are buying up every piece of ground large enough to build on (just!).

They have now drawn an invisible line around the new M25 motorway and are promising 4 new towns in Kent's green belt.

Kent National Front are urging everyone in Kent to fight against the major developments that are planned on the Garden of England.

The Channel Tunnel which Kent National Front are currently leafletting against has started taking its toll already. The Tory Party's claim that the Tunnel would be good for employment in Kent has been seen to be (at the very least!) somewhat naive - P & O ferries are using it as a lever to sack and cut back on seamen running their ferries. At present 44,000 people are involved with cross channel ferries. The employment estimate for the running of the Channel Tunnel is only 14,000. Kent could be receiving an extra 30,000 on their dole queues.

In the past few months Kent National Front has received a steady flow of new members from the South Coast and in the next few weeks hope, with the help of Brighton Branch, to hold activities campaigning on the protection of the Kent countryside to enable the establishment of firm NF branches on the Kent Coast. All enquiries for Kent should be sent to P.O. Box 89, Sevenoaks, Kent TN13 2BQ.

BRISTOL NF AT RACE MEETING

THE CHAIRMAN of a meeting of the Commission for Racial Equality, held in The Council House, Bristol, was livid and Asian Councillors very worried when more than a dozen members of Bristol National Front turned up to listen to the proceedings.

The meeting was brought to a halt when the attendance book was read out and name after name was signed 'member of the National Front'. The chairman, an ex-Lady Mayoress of Bristol said that it was disgraceful that the NF had the arrogance and audacity to turn up at a meeting concerning racism, and she terminated the meeting when the NF members accused the CRE of being racist itself in its positive discrimination policy of putting the ethnic minorities first in jobs, housing and welfare.

A spokesman for Bristol NF later denied that any of their members had let off stink bombs at the end of the meeting.

PLACE NAMES CAMPAIGN

NORTH LONDON NF have been hitting the headlines of local papers with their campaign against the re-naming of British streets with the names of Blacks, Asians and Africa terrorists.

In one campaign in Wembley where the local council want to change the name of Park Street to Nelson Mandela Street, leaflets produced by North London NF entitled Nelson Not Mandela with a picture of Horatio Nelson, have stirred up the local white residents to fight the name change.

Credit for the success of this campaign must go to North London Regional Organiser Bob Nash.

ALBERT MARINER DRUM CORPS

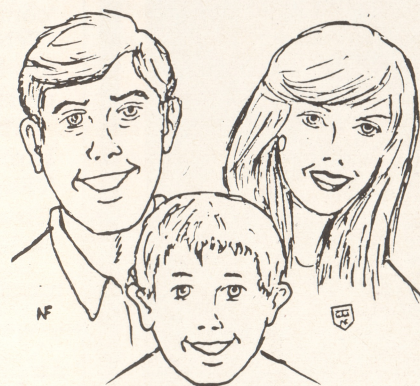

THE BIRMINGHAM based ALBERT Mariner Drum Corps are in fine fettle and looking forward to their first engagement at the NF St George's Day Parade through Leeds.

Under the guidance of Mark Rea, the Drum Corp have become a very professional and competent unit with four snare drums and a bass. Over the next few months Mark will be looking to increase this with more drums, some cymbals and bugles.

The establishing of the Albert Mariner Drum Corps has been a great achievement, made possible only by the most generous help of former Lambeth NF Secretary Martin French who put up the £1000 necessary to get the project off the ground.

Albert Mariner would have been very proud to see his drum corp leading the NF Parade on April 23rd.

Save our Countryside

Dear Sir,
I am a miner, and spending my worktime underground I value our British countryside and beautiful heritage.

It is because of this I hate to see the amount of graffiti on our buildings. I can understand coloured immigrants having no respect, not having our traditions, but last weekend I saw 'NF' painted on a wall near Durham Cathedral.

While I appreciated the sentiment, I feel that we should be setting an example and not desecrating our great history. I'm sure if all local NF groups discouraged such vandalism it would soon stop, especially as the patriotic hearts of young NF supporters would surely see the sense in it.

Round here it is only putting people off the NF as it gives us a bad image. So please, leaflets, posters and badges to support us but not spray cans or marker pens.

Yours sincerely,
John Patterson

Ed: Please see the Editorial in FLAG No.17. It expressed your exact sentiments.

Under the Influence

Dear Sir,
Thank you for the Editorial comment in January's issue of The FLAG on the Church of England, it could not have been put better. It is sadly under control of two factions at the moment, the High Church or Anglo-Catholic or whatever, which is taking us back to medieval practice and the liberal wing, which many bishops and theological college principals belong to.

Far from giving the lead they ought to do to Church and Nation, they are demolishing it stone by stone, with the compliance of the Church Commissioners, after deliberately emptying them first.

I was a little confused by your last sentence. The Church did have services solidly based on Scripture

NHS: The True Picture

Dear Sir.

As a qualified chef working in the Health Service for a mere £75 for a 40hr week I see waste everyday that I am powerless to stop or question.

Vast amounts of money are being spent on the mental health care side of the NHS on grandiose community schemes which are unnecessary, costly and destined to fail because of the increased staff levels desired. Many top administrators have interests in such projects and the liberal bleeding-hearts lobby is entrenched in promoting it!

Meanwhile the general side of the NHS is groaning under inadequate funding, charities now buy the most expensive necessary pieces of equipment, wards are staffed by trainee nurses and junior doctors work

- the Book of Common Prayer in good colourful English. The so-called alternative services have brought division and confusion.

I agree with your comments on the Education Bill. It is a phoney and will not mean more parent participation. I've no objection to my children learning about Albania or Paraguay - they can find out what is really going on in the world, not what the BBC/ITV tell them - as long as priority is given to the history and culture of our own country.

Neither do I mind older children

Ridiculous

It's ridiculous that your paper keeps harping on about Zola Budd. She has as much right to live in this country as the millions of Asians, Africans and West Indians now resident here. In other words no right at all!

over 100 hours per week in many cases!

Wards close, nurses leave the service in their thousands every year, privatisation is threatened on remaining ancillary staff although it has been proved the tendering we so often hear about costs more to implement, run and organise than is actually saved overall in replacing NHS workers with private!

Most contractors win tenders by simply reducing already low wages further, often by as much as 20%.

1988 will see the NHS under funded by £300 million. It's a deliberate Government policy designed to slowly and cleverly privatise the Health Service. To the workers within the NHS it is all so blatantly obvious.

ST GEORGE'S DAY BANNER

MANY THANKS to Spencer Nesbitt of the Birmingham Branch of the National Front for making the 'British Names for British Places' banner which will lead the NF's St George's Day Parade through Leeds on April 23rd.

BROWN TROUT FACE EXTINCTION

BRITAIN'S NATIVE brown trout, the quarry of millions of anglers, is in danger of extinction.

Alarming evidence submitted to the Game Conservancy indicates that stocks are on the decline in waters from the lochs of Scotland to the chalk streams of Hampshire.

The blame for the decline is the pollution caused by acid rain and farm effluents. On Loch Fleet in Galloway, catches began to fall in 1950, and no fish at all have been caught since 1975 because of acid rainfall.

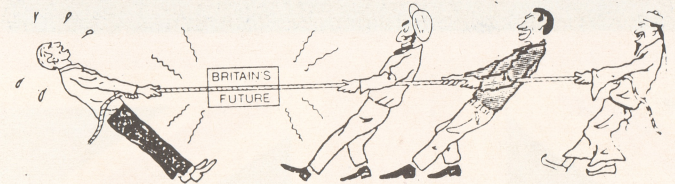

● Brown Trout: Facing extinction

The National Front calls upon the government to help save the brown trout by introducing stringent measures to halt the pollution of our rivers by farm effluence. Also the Government should make available funds for a project designed to breed the brown trout and return it to Britain's streams.

THE POLL TAX: Robbing the Poor to Give to the Rich!

National Front Policy Briefing from Andrew Brons of the NF Policy Department.

IT IS a favourite ploy of all governments to win support for a measure by discrediting its supposed alternatives. So it is with the present administration and its poll tax or community charge.

A sales tax would encourage people to cross local government boundaries to pay a lower tax rate on expensive goods. The present rating system does fall unfairly on householders and leave non-householders untaxed. It is also clear that it places an unfair burden on vulnerable small businesses in high-spending areas.

The proposal of Tory backbenchers to introduce three bands of poll tax would undoubtedly operate crudely with 'poverty traps' by which a small increase in income could lead to a larger increase in poll tax.

However, its sole response to a proposal for a local income tax is to point out that income tax is a progress tax that redistributes income from the rich to the poor and to claim that the redistribution function is a prerogative of central government.

It scarcely needs to be pointed out that, since the budget it has almost ceased to be the function of central government!

The Poll Tax is unashamedly regressive - that is it falls more heavily on the less well off and less heavily on the 'better off'. The rich will pay smaller proportions of their incomes than the poor. The proposed 'National Business Rate' will certainly free business from the clutches of high-spending councils but it will make no distinction between businesses of different turnover or different profitability.

The principal argument against income tax is that it is complex and expensive to assess and collect. However there is no need to duplicate the work of central government. The same assessment can be used by both levels of government.

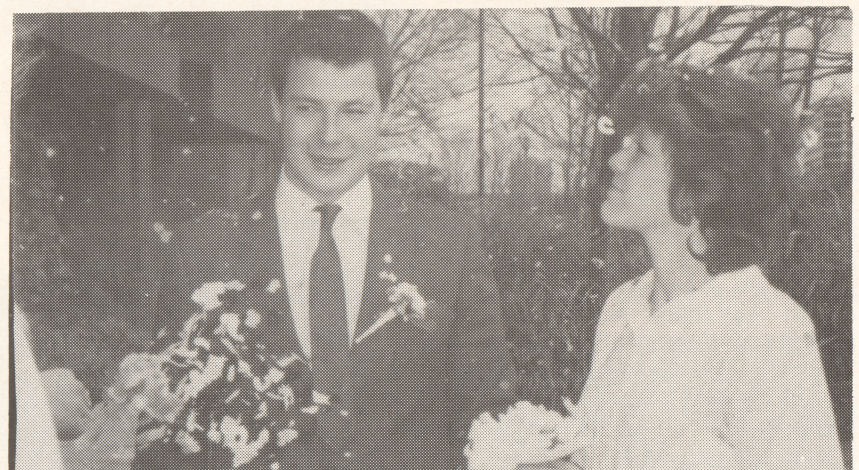

Providing there are legal safeguards against central government withholding such money from local authorities to avert political control, there can be no objection to central government collecting as well as assessing the tax.

If a progressive tax system can be justified for central government - and we believe it can - it is just as acceptable for local government. The rich must pay proportionately as well as absolutely more than the poor. Under the proposed poll tax rich will pay the same absolutely and proportionately less.

The proposed national rate for businesses is not flawed in principle. However, it must be introduced as part of a distributist policy of encouraging widespread ownership. Sole proprietors - especially those with few or no employees and a modest turnover must be charged a minimal rate. Large businesses with many employees must be charged prohibitive rates with the excess being used to enable employees to buy shares in their own workplaces as a prelude to those companies becoming producers' co-operatives. Existing producers' co-operatives would, like small businesses, pay a minimal rate, although the members would still pay the local income tax.

Our system of local government taxation would not only meet the requirements of social justice. It would play a major part in restructuring the economy and society.

CHIRAC ANNOUNCES WORLD CUP VENUE

THE 1998 Football World Cup is to be held in France. The French Prime Minister and presidential candidate, Jacques Chirac announced this at an election rally in Dijon on 19th February.

Now this is all a bit strange, because the decision as to the location of the World Cup is made by a vote of the 24 man executive of FIFA which does not meet to consider the matter until 30th June.

But this clearly doesn't worry Joao Havelange, the President of FIFA - as Chirac announced -

"I have already negotiated the matter with the president of FIFA, Joao Havelange, and we have the 1998 World Cup".

It would seem that having been humiliated over the refusal of the home countries to field just one 'British' team rather than separate national teams, Havelange is determined to make sure that France and not England get the 1998 World Cup.

In this aim he is clearly not going to allow little matters like democracy to get in his way.

STABBED IN THE BACK!

IN 1984 Jayne Torvill and Christopher Dean captured everyone's imagination when they won the Olympic Gold Medal for their skating. Everywhere they went they were looked after, and for years they had been actively supported by their home town of Nottingham where they were treated as sporting royalty.

In 1988 these two skaters have decided to repay all those people who helped them in their career... by helping French skaters! At the Winter Olympics in Canada they choreographed the French routines and cheered on the French team.

Could it really be true that there are no British youngsters who would appreciate the type of help that Torvill and Dean should provide, and which they in their youth also received.

It seems that loyalty and gratitude do not figure in their vocabulary.

NEXT TIME you want a spare part for your car, bike etc. please don't go to Halfords.

NEARLY THE DAY OF THE DEAD

LINCOLN CITY, the club relegated from the football league last season into non-league oblivion have nearly clawed their way back from the dead!

On Easter Monday in front of a crowd of 7,542, a non league record they thrashed Boston 5-1 to take them 2nd in the GM Conference League 4 points behind leaders Barnet but with two games in hand.

A SPORTING SCHEME THAT BENEFITS EVERYONE

BASILDON IN Essex may not be the centre of the sporting universe, but that isn't stopping the local council from proceeding with a highly ambitious sports stadium.

The indoor venture, costing £30 million and holding 40,000 spectators, will be the largest in Europe and is being built by a private company. It will have facilities for cricket, football, athletics, hockey, tennis, equestrian events, skating and boxing.

It makes a pleasant change to see a council supporting a scheme which benefits everyone. But then Basildon Council has never been a council to fawn over and squander money on Black Womens' Co-operatives and Lesbian Rights Centre. London's East Enders who have moved out of the capital to escape the multi-racial nightmare have got more sense than that.

Why Should Football Clubs Have to Pay that Bill?

URGED ON by the attitude of the present Conservative Government, Hampshire Police Authority is considering charging Portsmouth and Southampton football clubs with the cost of having police officers outside their grounds on match days.

Along with all other football clubs both Portsmouth and Southampton pay for policing inside their grounds, even if they don't want the police.

Ted Mason, the assistant county secretary with Hampshire Council said,

"Some people will ask why football should be penalised. After all, CND rallies, Blood Sports and horse racing can also require large numbers of police".

We should add that so did last year's Conservative Party Conference where the policing bill exceeded £250,000 not including the cost of the Royal Navy frigate which was stationed off shore.

Perhaps Mrs Thatcher will accept responsibility and pay for this.

● The Heysel tragedy: Whoever was to blame, the time has now come for British teams, once again, to take part in European Competitions.

TIME TO REINSTATE OUR TEAMS

ENGLISH FOOTBALL clubs were excluded from Europe as part of a hysterical reaction to the tragedy at the Heysel stadium in Belgium. The ban was imposed as a 'punishment' to English fans despite grave doubts as to exactly who started the trouble.

The time has come for this ruling to be reversed. Over the past year English fans have been no worse than those from other European nations.

To take but one example, on the 6th March Napoli were at home to Roma in the Italian League. During the riot which preceded the game six police were injured as stones and petrol bombs were thrown. Yet Italian clubs are still allowed to play in Europe while English clubs are barred.

This is completely unfair. English clubs should be reinstated NOW!

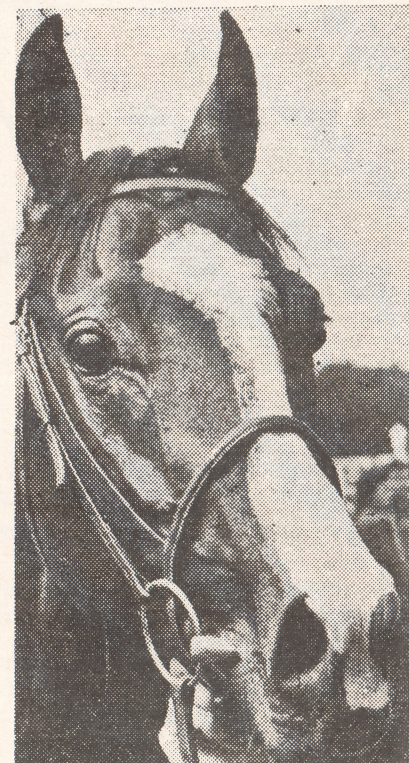

CARMELITE HOUSE TO FOLLOW IN HIS FOOTSTEPS

REFERENCE POINT was our advice for last year's Derby, and we told you to back it a full ten weeks before the race.

Carmelite House from the same Henry Cecil stable is our tip for this year's race. Get on now! We're certain this colt will follow in 'The Point's' footsteps.
